The first part of the paper discusses the importance of understanding the underlying mechanisms of the observed phenomena. It is crucial to identify the factors that influence the outcome and to establish a clear causal relationship. This involves a thorough review of the existing literature and a careful analysis of the data. The second part of the paper presents the results of the study, which show that the proposed model is effective in predicting the outcome. The results are supported by statistical tests and are consistent with the theoretical expectations. The third part of the paper discusses the implications of the findings and suggests directions for future research. It is important to note that the study has some limitations, and further research is needed to address these issues. The fourth part of the paper concludes the study and summarizes the main findings. The authors express their gratitude to the funding agency and the participants who made the study possible. Finally, the authors provide a list of references and a list of figures and tables.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase by 1.5 billion.

As the world's population grows, the demand for food and other resources will increase. The world's population is expected to reach 9 billion by the year 2050. This means that there will be 9 billion people competing for the same resources that we have today. This is a huge challenge for the world's leaders and citizens.

One of the most important ways to address this challenge is by increasing the world's food production. This can be done by using more efficient farming techniques, such as precision agriculture, and by increasing the number of people working in the agricultural sector. This will help to ensure that there is enough food to feed the growing world population.

Another important way to address this challenge is by reducing the world's consumption of resources. This can be done by using more sustainable practices, such as recycling and reducing energy consumption. This will help to ensure that there are enough resources to go around for everyone.

Finally, it is important to ensure that the world's resources are distributed fairly. This can be done by implementing policies that support the poor and the vulnerable. This will help to ensure that everyone has access to the resources they need to live a decent life.

These are just a few of the ways that the world's leaders and citizens can address the challenge of a growing world population. It is up to us to ensure that there is enough food and other resources to go around for everyone.

The role of American education is a very complex one in today's society. It must, through a varied program of intellectual and physical activity, prepare the nation's youth to face the reality of the adult world. From this training must come the basis for our country's greatness.

INDIVIDUAL ACHIEVEMENT

Such accomplishment has manifested itself in many areas throughout the past school year, as can be seen in outstanding performances of our many representatives. Having reached the culmination of the year, we salute those who achieved so brilliantly.

Autumn days bring end to summer fun

The Tuesday after Labor Day arrives—drawing the summer days to a close . . .

Swimming enthusiasts reluctantly abandoned the beach; working students sadly put their last big pay checks in their savings accounts.

Bandsmen wearily laid down their instruments for a brief recess of no practicing morning, noon, and nighttime, too. Industrious students turned carefree hours into the common drudgery of manual tasks—lawn mowing, housecleaning, baby-sitting; student leaders accumulated practical knowledge at specialized workshops throughout the Midwest; 4-H exhibitors proudly admired their ribbons which they had worked diligently to earn.

The "sleep-till-noon" group reset their alarm clocks for 6:30 a.m. as all students willingly (?) returned to the hurried routine of school life for another fun-filled year.

Below: Countless hours of summer practice for the Crown Point Marching Bulldog Band paid off as they copped first place at State Fair.

Resounding bell signals start of lessons

At 8 a.m., 25-30 students rush to each class, eager to exercise their imaginations. Busy students find precious time to cheer the team to victory—in French. In a practical application of knowledge, future machinists renovate autos. The challenge of competitions spurs 94 instrumentalists to capture firsts—a school record. Those who have the initiative to excel are honored at the Kiwanis banquet held every spring. These students are proud of fine records maintained continuously. They constitute the leaders of tomorrow.

Combos, loafers lead fads

Crown Point students earn many honors in interscholastic competition. Away from the public light, however, they lead lives of their own, enjoying themselves in a variety of ways.

The new year brought the hard, driving beat of the guitar-dominated combo, as spirited dancers yielded to the emotion-packed strains of the protest song.

Clasets reflected changing times with loafers and paisley ties, and hair-dos of both sexes gained length. Taps in the rec-raam was Cap'n Crunch, in two flavors and lots of calories.

After all this, one necessity remains to be dispased of—ever-present homework.

The last place to be at the beginning of either lunch hour is at the bottom of the one-way stairs leading into the cafeteria. Herds of hungry students rush pell-mell down this narrow passageway to form the "chow line."

Many students spend the 60 minutes loafing about the rec room—watching noontime basketball or volleyball games.

Some participate in other intramural activities, such as chess or ping-pong.

Students who choose not to eat the hot meal served by the cooks, either bring a packed lunch, eat uptown, or munch snacks bought in the rec room.

A familiar sight at noon is a two-step line with the dancers gabbling potato chips or cheeselets.

For the studious, lunch hour affords the extra time needed to finish incomplete homework.

No matter what use students find for this lunch break, all agree that the next hour comes all too soon.

Chattering students devour hot lunches

Left: While Allen Maaruder fills him in on the morning's happenings, Charlie Wise continues to eat his gravy train.

Any attempt at keeping the screaming Bulldog fans off the gym floor proved futile as the last seconds ticked by in the final game of sectional play. This year the whole town of Crown Point was swept up in sectional enthusiasm, beginning as soon as the school received notification that the 1966 tourney would be here. Mr. Rogers held numerous meetings with principals of the participating schools. To Assistant Principal Rager Childress fell the tremendous task of securing workers. Mr. Carl Carnahan, athletic director, took charge of caring for tickets and bleachers. Five active school clubs functioned in various jobs, as did the PTA in conjunction with the publications department. The entire county was pleased with the way Crown Point conducted its first sectional in history. Wild cheering broke forth again Monday morning during an all-school assembly, as fans, town boosters, and civic leaders wished the Bulldog team future success.

With a jubilant smile, 1965 graduate LaVeda Longfellow shares the thrill of impressive commencement ceremonies with her mother as she reads her newly awarded diploma.

Above: Two seniors experience the thrill of being near Astronaut Frank Borman. Below: John Mecklenburg and Lynn McNary win first place in a Rotary speech contest.

The success gained by various students throughout the school year is the direct result of individual effort.

As a fitting reward, a number of occasions during the year are dedicated to honoring such endeavors.

Various student leaders were chosen to represent Crown Point at the Frank Borman Day press conference. Monetary awards in civic-sponsored speech contests greeted outstanding orators, while high-scoring competitors attained finalist status in the National Merit Scholarship program. The closing of the year brought both senior and underclass honor days to recognize scholarship, citizenship, and athletic achievement within the student body.

Commencement, the senior class's final gathering, featured addresses by the valedictorian and salutatorian. Awards presented, school activity came to a close, and the honored recipients went their separate ways.

May assemblies honor leading scholars

Crown Point's six merit semi-finalists all achieved finalist status. They are Dan Kwall, Jan Evans, Frank Kyle, Sergine Oliver, Rebecca Beasley, and Ellen Reeder, who is not pictured.

AFS furthers international awareness

The new year saw Crown Point High School actively engaged in international as well as domestic affairs. For the first time since 1962, a Crown Point student was chosen for a summer overseas in the American Field Service program.

Senior Scott Shafer represented the United States in Switzerland, leading their way of life while spreading American good will. In return, the Hub city received a native Brazilian, Maria Brondaa.

Hailing from Salvador, Maria spent her local days at the home of the Kurt Mattson family. One of her biggest moments was her selection as a member of the Homecoming Queen's court, as she proved most popular with the Bulldog student body.

According to Scott, he participated in a track meet and won, leaving him with an undefeated record in international competition. Both played their part in furthering world-wide understanding by sharing their experiences with local service organizations. CPHS was truly fortunate to have participated in this valuable program.

Spotlight shines on fanciful shows

The Class of 1966 first experienced the thrill of producing their own show as juniors.

A combination of the props, make-up, tickets, lighting and costumes committees—not to mention the actors and actresses themselves—all accounted for the staging of

The Mouse That Roared.

Resounding applause affirmed the production's success.

With the guiding hand of faculty director Marion Kellum, the seniors chose a play to capture the fancy of young and old alike . . . Sleeping Beauty.

Pre-curtain activities aimed to delight children, including a coloring contest and a parade led by jester Beth Keene, lured the little folks to a special matinee.

Aside from the matinee, Sleeping Beauty boasted having played a packed two-nighter—November 19 and 20—to both students and adults.

All members of the cast and staff, along with all the spectators, unanimously agree that "happiness is putting on a class play."

Upper left: Listening to Chuck Lee's Pledge of Allegiance to Fenwick are B. White, J. Evans, and T. Sheehan. Lower left: Climaxing "Sleeping Beauty" is the marriage of Veranica Grandys to Chuck Lee.

In this age of global transportation, complex communication systems, and vital international competition, a critical need is being felt for a greater supply of talented and well-trained youth to keep efficiency and advancement at a minimum. America is looking to its new generation, the student of today, to provide the impetus for an expending future. This responsibility lies with education and Crown Point High School is striving to rise to the occasion. In order to meet this challenge, a varied curriculum of technically and intellectually oriented courses is being offered to keep pace with our ever-changing world.

English students

Who was Beowulf? Just ask any senior English student. They learn all about this hero of the great medieval English epic. They also study Chaucer's Canterbury Tales and read classic novels selected from a long list. Creative writing is another important facet of this course; in some classes, the year-end term paper is a statement of the student's personal philosophy of life.

Juniors read one or more of three novels: The Scarlet Letter, The Red Badge of Courage, and The Bridge of San Luis Rey. Such widely differing books present quite a challenge to the students; they must analyze the plots, characterizations, and writing styles. Many junior English students write their first real term paper for this class: they select a famous quote, then do research on it and its author.

Sophomores are studying the new transformational grammar as well as reviewing traditional grammar principles. They also read from a list of twentieth-century works, which includes books by Sinclair Lewis, Theodore Dreiser, and Ernest Hemingway.

Starting their first year of high school English, freshmen review grammar and usage, and then familiarize themselves with great literature by reading The Odyssey and Dickens' Great Expectations. The work is difficult, but the knowledge gained will be useful to the student throughout his life.

Above: Speech classes raise many debatable questions about current events as Tom Hovestock points out. Right, Sue Connelly uses review exercises to study effectively for her up-coming grammar quiz.

Student travel incorporates

Left: Jack Dawning and Marcella Scoggs browse through two editions of Latin. Above: Discussing the origin of the Spanish customs and language are Brenda Haugh and Rick McFadden.

"Je suis l'américain." "Say el americana." This year the French and Spanish students are busy brushing up on their pronunciation; some members of these classes plan to travel to Europe this summer to study in France and Spain, respectively. Any student of either language who has completed one year of that language by May is eligible to make the trip.

Fourth-year Latin was made available this year; now there are fourth-year courses open to students of all three languages taught at Crown Point. Such advanced study prepares the pupil for college; many of the advanced students plan to someday teach the language they are now learning. The first and second level classes are more popular than ever; many people are discovering the importance of bilingual communication in a quickly shrinking world.

World History classes study man from his first primitive civilizations through recorded history to the present. United States history, a requirement for juniors, concentrates on American history from the colonial period to the Cold War. While all seniors are required to enroll in one semester of civics and one of economics, others elect additional classes in psychology or sociology. In-class dramatizations such as enacting negotiations between labor unions and business management as well as the writing of term papers and viewing films bring history to life for students.

Rapid and repeated drill in French word pronunciation is just one of the many teaching methods Mr. Reid Lewis employs in beginning French.

language, history

Above: Mock labor and management bargaining sessions are enacted by senior economics classes.

Right: To illustrate a confusing statement Pam Wilson uses the world map as a helpful guide in achieving a better understanding of her topic.

Classes team up

Employing powers of reasoning, math students are challenged to think logically. Checking on assigned geometry theorem is Steve Farley.

Sophomores find the time spent in lab a refreshing break from the usual classroom lecture. Dissecting a worm are Linda Kerr and Carol Burns.

As an experiment in team teaching, biology instructors shared in lecturing on the earthworm for three days. Meanwhile the unpleasant scent of sulphur permeated the halls as chemistry students scurried to complete experiments. In the next room Mr. Leonard Saylor stressed Hooke's Law to science majors enrolled in physics, the practical science. General science was offered as a second choice for those not electing a biology course. This year Don Geeze was eligible to attend seminars held at the Natural History Museum.

Interested Math students plan a four year curriculum including Algebra I, plane geometry, Algebra II, and Senior Math, a study of trigonometry, solid geometry, and calculus. Many enthusiasts enter state-wide contests and frequently score high. Modern math techniques are becoming an integral part of the mathematics program, as nearly every course requires students to apply inductive and deductive reasoning.

A concentrated study of the plant and animal kingdoms makes amateur zoologists and botanists from sophomore biology students.

Above: In learning to use a balancing scale, Casey Murray will be able to accurately measure chemicals. Below: The use of a slide rule will save Bob White unnecessary work solving a physics problem.

Student company employs business, shop

When the library needs new magazine racks, they may well ask a new school organization, Pencil Pushers, Inc., to do the job. It is a consulting engineers' company which has been formed within the advanced mechanical drawing class. The students draw up plans which are then sent to the machine or wood shops, where the product is manufactured. Pencil Pushers, Inc. has designed magazine racks and clamps for the wood shop. They charge only for the materials used.

Industrial arts majors have the option of studying machine shop, auto mechanics, welding, and architectural drawing. These boys often enter careers in carpentry, mechanics or architecture.

If some typed letters are needed quickly, one of Crown Point's business majors would be glad to help you. They must practice their shorthand and typing skills; accuracy is of critical importance in obtaining a good job. Field trips help broaden students' practical experience; this year general business classes visited a local bank, where they observed proper business procedure. Some students obtain valuable experience by working as assistants in the school office. Other courses such as bookkeeping and business law also help prepare the business major for the future.

Fine arts further creativity

Modern writers would have us believe that teenagers today have little interest in the fine arts; however, two of the favorite elective courses at CPHS are art and music. Over 100 enthusiastic students enroll annually in beginning art classes. In addition, most continue in one of the seven daily advanced art courses. Tempera, oils, and charcoal are used extensively as mediums of expression.

At the start of the holiday season, the art students moved into the music wing to portray the Christmas Story with life-size figures painted on the windows.

Those students possessing talent in the music field find an array of courses offered. Many hours are spent in preparation for convocations and frequent concerts. Members of the four choirs lift imaginary suitcases during rehearsal to develop correct breathing techniques and posture. Bandsmen must also master drills that strengthen breathing and aid them in producing a balanced quality of tone.

Vocational courses stress practicality

As you walk through the halls in the home economics area, you might be lucky enough to catch the aroma of freshly baked rolls or coke. Girls interested in homemaking can take courses in sewing, culinary arts, child care, and interior decorating. Young seamstresses learn how to set in a sleeve properly, then practice their newly-acquired skills by making an attractive blouse. Those girls taking cooking classes are taught the right technique for making candy, then share their delicious confections with the other girls. In child care, home economics majors often have real children to take charge of—teachers frequently volunteer their own youngsters for the program.

Students in the agricultural department learn farming skills such as crop rotation and scientific use of fertilizer. Those boys interested in raising animals are taught the best methods for breeding and general care. Agriculture majors graduate prepared to run their farm the modern way.

Driver's training, gym champion

Bill McConnehey learns the skills of driving a car as driver's training teacher, Mr. Leon Dean keeps a watchful eye on his rear-view mirror.

Each semester driver's education classes reach capacity enrollment early in registration. This course is designed to train high school students to be responsible drivers. Those taking the course are not only instructed in safe driving, but they also learn the parts and operation of the gasoline engine. Any student who successfully completes the state approved course is eligible to receive his driver's license when he reaches the age of sixteen years and one month. Local auto dealers contribute one new car a year to the school.

Gym courses develop muscle coordination and improve health, besides providing a pleasant recreation period for the student. Physical education is required during the freshman and sophomore years; juniors and seniors may be student instructors. Students exercise and learn to use the apparatus as well as play more conventional games. Each year, National Fitness Tests are administered to rank the students with others around the country.

The mandatory health course, usually taken during the freshman or sophomore year teaches students about various diseases and how they may be prevented. It also includes a short section on human anatomy, with much emphasis placed on hygienic health habits.

Student drivers learn not to neglect the cars they drive. Chris Kleinschmidt helps Mr. Stillwagon check the car for a flat tire.

Life encompasses far more than the mere span of book learning. In the years ahead, Crown Point High School students will mingle with many different types of people, participate in numerous organizations, and in some cases even direct a few worthwhile projects. Preparation for this phase of life is equally as important as training in the intellectual and technical skills. The administration, faculty, and student body fully realize this need and have, over the years, established a comprehensive program of activities to fit the tastes and talents of nearly every individual.

centralizes functions of Student Council

The opening of the Student Council office across from the study hall highlighted the Council's achievements for 1965-66. By providing a centralized location for suggestions and grievances from the student body, the Council became more aware of the students' desires and could act accordingly. Another undertaking of the legislative body was a plan for its reorganization. Headed by junior Ann Christopherson, a committee investigated possible alterations in the membership of the Council for the time when the ninth grade is moved to the junior high school.

Most of the officers and quite a few of the other members of the Student Council attended numerous workshops throughout the year, including a week-long summer institute at Indiana University on the Bloomington campus and the state convention at Indianapolis in the fall. After serving as guides for orientation and the first day of school, the groups resumed bi-weekly meetings as well as the daily maintenance of the snack bar facilities.

Sometime during the course of their lunch hour, most students make their way to the Student Council concession stand in the recreation room.

The Safe-Driving Committee stresses the importance of careful operation of all students' cars. The committee is headed by the vice president of the Student Council but is comprised primarily of non-Council members. These people safety-check student vehicles, issuing a school parking permit for those which pass inspection. Most cars pass this detailed check on their mufflers, lights, turn signals, brakes, and horns.

Pam Schweitzer, the recipient of this year's DAR Good Citizenship Award, was chosen on the basis of dependability, leadership, service, and patriotism. She was selected for this award after two rounds of balloting by students and faculty. Pam then had to take a test to determine the Lake County winner, who then went on to state competition. This spring, Pam was honored at a meeting of the local Daughters of the American Revolution Chapter, where she and representatives from other schools, received pins denoting their achievement.

Eleven students represented Crown Point at the week-long Boys' and Girls' State conventions at Indiana University. These programs were mock governmental sessions in which the delegates elected representatives to serve under the supervision of counselors, who taught the techniques of campaigning for office. Citizenship and ethics were stressed as the students contended for leadership.

DAR Good Citizen Pam Schweitzer qualified to compete for further honors with other regional title-holders.

Officers lead class activities

Seniors culminate successful high school careers by planning graduation and baccalaureate. Officers are Tom Toering, vice president; Gary Paarlberg, president; Gretchen Mills, secretary; Katy Moffitt, treasurer.

As the seniors rush through their final, exciting year at CPHS, they participate in many activities which they will remember for the rest of their lives. In the fall, there is the excitement of new cords and the class play. Finally, after the preliminary concern over invitations and cap and gown fittings, comes those two long-awaited events—baccalaureate and graduation. Then, happy that their four years of high school are behind them, but somehow sad that they must leave the place they know so well, they receive their diplomas.

Members of the junior class get their class sweaters in the fall and produce a play in the spring. However, their main responsibility is to finance the Junior-Senior Prom; they raise the money through a class-sponsored Friday night dance and the concession stand, which is operated at all home football games.

The sophomores start off their second year in high school by voting on and purchasing attractive class rings. Later on, they develop splitting headaches over the sophomore achievement tests; when they finish, they moan that they would not go through that sort of agony again for anything. At the end of the year, the sophs pick a style and color for their class sweaters.

Though it takes the freshmen a few weeks to adjust to high school life, by winter they fit in as well as upperclassmen. In October, they sponsor a freshman mixer.

Junior officers are Barb Peterson, treasurer; Pauline K. Doty, secretary; Charles Colyer, vice president and John Orman, president.

Selecting samples of class rings to be voted on is one duty of sophomore officers who are Amanda Lewis, secretary; Dan Strang, treasurer; Barbara Wild, vice president, and Randy Dunn, president.

Freshman officers Scott Cax, president; Debbie Magallanes, vice president; Don Allen, treasurer; and Jennifer Duncan, secretary, lead functions of the class.

Spanish, French clubs evolve by interest

An active interest in specialized language-oriented activities fostered the division of the Modern Language Club into two groups—one for French and another for Spanish. Through the alteration in organization, both groups realized expansion of enrollment.

The activities of the Sociedad Linguistica de Espanol included a hayride, a trip to the Museum of Science and Industry, and an ice skating party.

Le Cercle Francois, with over 100 members, highlighted its year's activities with a trip to the Bloomington campus to see the great Marcel Marceau. Club members also took a trip to Chicago to learn more about French history. Many social activities, including a swimming party, were enjoyed by the French Club.

A study of the Gallic Wars and Caesar's triumphs fill the time of the Latin students in the Junior Classical League. The J.C.L. combines the study of the language with the study of the Roman Empire. Members took a field trip into Chicago to view classical Greek and Roman exhibits. The J.C.L. ended the year with the traditional Cena Ramana, or Roman banquet, with all first year students serving as slaves, and seniors, who have had at least two years of Latin, were invited guests. Two were cited as outstanding.

A hayride on a crisp, October evening, followed by roasting hot dogs and marshmallows, began the fall season for the Art Club. At the November meeting, the Club was honored to have a guest speaker on the topic of fashion. With the coming of Christmas, the Art Club decorated the doors and windows of the music wing. When the weather got warmer, the Club took a trip to the Art Institute and saw a stage play in Chicago.

Established for girls who desire to go into nursing, the Health Careers Club furthers knowledge in therapy and first aid. The members of the Club made trips to various hospitals and to the Lake County Convalescent Home.

A trip to the Crown Point Clinic started off the year's activities for the 36 science enthusiasts of the Biology Club. Every month the members attended an activity meeting where they delved into biology as they had never done before in regular biology classes. Various animals were brought to the meetings and dissected and observed by the members. The Club obtained movies from the Heart Association and at the end of the year a field trip to a lab was planned.

Having continually won top honors through excellent performances, the Speech and Debate Club is a member of the Calumet Forensic League. Tuesday evenings find the members competing with neighboring schools by entering into debates on current events or expounding on classic topics.

One of the many special meets in which Crown Point participated was the Purdue Legislative Conference. Competing against students from throughout the state, Crown Point delegate, Zane Swanson achieved a distinguished award for producing an outstanding bill which was introduced and passed readily. On a smaller scale, the Speech and Debate Club then sponsored its own legislative assembly in the spring.

A visit to I.U. to see the famous French pantomimist, Marcel Marceau, a trip to the I.U. Extension to preview "A Member of the Wedding," and building a classroom stage at school kept the Drama Club on the go. Although the Club only met twice a month, the members found time to attend dress rehearsals at Valparaiso University and also returned home with high honors for their dramatic readings in the speech contests throughout the district. A production of one-act plays displayed group talents.

The Future Business Leaders of America, which completed its third year as an active club this year, helps students understand the great responsibilities of the business world. Trips to Chicago's Merchandise Mart and the Federal Reserve Bank showed the members the many different jobs available in the commercial field. The highlight of the FBLA's year was the state convention attended by all of the members.

The whirl of sewing machines and the fresh smell of baked rolls fill the halls after school when the Future Homemakers of America meet bimonthly. During the Christmas season the members of the Club give a dinner to honor their mothers. This year each mother was presented with a pin cushion resembling a flower pot. In the spring, the Future Homemakers unite with the home economics classes to present a fashion show and a tea. All the garments worn in the show are handmade by those who participate as models.

Working in the concession stand at home basketball games are members of the Future Teachers of America. All money made at the games is combined with the Club's dues to give a scholarship to a deserving senior member. The seniors of the Club do cadet teaching at the elementary schools, and underclassmen help teachers in the high school. The Club traveled to Hobart and South Bend this year to attend the District Round-ups.

The members of the Future Farmers of America take part in soil, dairy, poultry, and crop projects throughout the year. In the spring, the boys are honored at a district banquet. Last summer they held an exhibition at the Lake County Fair entitled "Young McDonald's Farm."

The Sunshine Society is a real favorite of Crown Point candy connoisseurs. However, the organization is not popular by virtue of its candy sale alone. It is one of the largest and most active clubs in the school; membership is open to all girls. A colorful candlelight initiation is held each September.

In the fall, Sunshine and Hi-Y join forces for Bundle Day, collecting discarded clothing from the community, which they send to needy families. At Thanksgiving, the Society distributes baskets of food to underprivileged families in the Crown Point area. The girls make Christmas decorations in December, placing one on each teacher's desk.

During the winter, the Sunshine Society's most important fund-raising project is the candy sale. Each girl is given five points for every box of candy she sells, and the one who sells the most receives a special award. The proceeds from the candy sale is donated to the Riley Fund, an organization which aids and educates handicapped children.

Socially, Sunshine is very active; in the spring it sponsors the Rose Dance, and in February it collaborates with Hi-Y to give a semi-formal dance. The May Breakfast is a fitting climax to a very active year for the Sunshine Society.

On a brisk, fall day the Hi-Y united with the Sunshine Society to conduct their annual clothing drive. This year the clubs collected 4,600 pounds of clothing for the people of the Appalachian area. In addition to the clothing drive, Hi-Y helped out at all home football and basketball games by directing cars. They also sold tickets for the freshman and reserve games.

During the Christmas season, the members of the Hi-Y took part in a basketball tournament with the other Hi-Y clubs in Gory communities. In February, the Hi-Y again joined with the Sunshine Society to present the Sunshine-Hi-Y semi-formal. It was decided to choose the Hi-Y Sweetheart on this occasion. To round out the year's activities, the Club sponsored a cook-out in the spring.

The Letterman's Club was organized to honor major letter winners. Sweaters and jackets are awarded to athletes who meet the qualifications. The Club, like the Hi-Y, is also active at all home games. Members solicit advertising for programs which they sell at games. They also man the Student Council pop stand. This year the lettermen raised funds for the Cool Pool Copers and in the spring they united with the GAA to sponsor a semi-formal, ending the year's agenda with an annual banquet.

School spirit is displayed in the halls and recreation area in the form of booster posters and banners as well as selling of red and white Bulldog sweatshirts by GAA officers Sue Bays, Ann Christopherson, and Betty Repasky. Both organizations promote CPHS loyalty.

GAA, Booster Club bolster athletics

Whether it be vaulting over the horse in gymnastic competition or driving the ball to third base in a fun-filled softball game, the Girls' Athletic Association promotes participation in all sports. Besides boosting physical fitness, the GAA sells Crown Point Bulldog sweatshirts and uses this money for the scholarship awarded annually to the deserving senior who wishes to make physical therapy or physical education her career.

Over 300 girls coped in red and white dazzled judges at the Griffith Holiday Tourney as they capped the best cheer block trophy for the third consecutive year. Through the outstanding display of sportsmanship, Booster Club members lead the force of fons backing interscholastic sports competition.

Homecoming was the Club's largest money making project. Many weeks of planning went into all the activities of Homecoming: the snake dance, the bonfire, the parade, and of course, the football game.

Booster Club officers are Molly Fifield, president, Dione Allison, vice president, Janet Smith, treasurer, and Aggie Bednor, secretary.

During a heated game the Booster Block urges the team on the victory. New cheers and hand motions are taught to the Block every year.

Varsity cheerleaders are (kneeling) Pam Cox; front to top: Tammy Duykers, Cindy Sendak, Pauline Doty. They bolster enthusiasm for athletics.

Cheerleaders show lively enthusiasm

School loyalty and stamina are two of the main attributes a cheerleader has to possess. During the summer, long practices get the cheering squads into condition for the fall season. This year the varsity cheerleaders attended Camp All-American in Michigan where they developed new ideas into cheers.

At the first football game, the cheerleaders found that the crowds weren't very enthusiastic. To build up spirit when the basketball season started, the cheerleaders had a pep session in which Pauline Doty portrayed the dying school spirit. Their attempt proved successful as the Booster Block turned out to be one of the most enthusiastic crowds ever.

Joining the cheering squad is not easy to do. The cheerleaders are selected in May for the following year. After a thorough screening by the faculty, 12 girls show their abilities to the student body. The day after the girls try out for the students they are elected. Four girls are chosen for the varsity and four become the junior varsity squad.

The freshman cheerleaders are elected in the fall by the freshman class. The four girls chosen cheer at all the freshman football and basketball games. Altogether the cheerleaders are invaluable to the spirit of the school.

Amidst the flurry of Homecoming activity, rain-hatted cheerleaders Cindy Sendak, Pauline Doty and Tammy Duykers care for the mascot. In spite of always being on the go, cheerleaders Pam Cox and Pauline Doty, take a minute out to watch half-time activities.

A Cappella members Koren Henderlong, Non Alston, and Nancy Joiner master their parts as Pamela Patton accompanies them on the piano.

Talented vocalists organize Madrigals

Development of new vocal interests and furthering of musical talents occurs within the program of A Cappella choir. A new singing group, the Madrigals, was innovated by the equally new choral director, Karen Cawman.

The A Cappella began the year with the annual A Cappella Preview. The audience enjoyed new unusual songs which were introduced to the choir by Miss Cawman.

In December, the A Cappella united with the Symphonic Band to present a Christmas program. The Choir participated in the District Choral Contest in February. The contest consists of two divisions. All contestants use the same music and anyone winning a first class rating goes on to compete in the state contest. The A Cappella also took part in county contests during the year.

This year, the Choir chose to do the Broadway hit, "Bye Bye Birdie," for their operetta. The high school gymnasium became a small town frenzied by the visit of a teenage singing idol.

Besides A Cappella, Miss Cawman directs the Swing Choir, Madrigals, and the Boys' and Girls' Glee Clubs. Members for these groups are selected after tryouts in the early fall.

Vocalists stage spectacular showing

Debby Dieman strains her ears to hear what Julie, Jackie Mills, is saying to Carrie, Cindy Morris.

As important as the actors and actresses are, the operetta could not be really effective without the "lightman," Dave Swallow.

The band struck up the "Carousel" theme, the house lights dimmed, and the audience grew quiet. As the players ran out onto the stage for the opening scene, many thoughts ran through their minds. Would the performance be a success, or would their many weeks' work have been in vain? Would they appear nervous or self-confident? Would the work of the costume and scenery committees show up well under the glaring spotlights? Would the audience fall into the mood of the musical and truly appreciate the presentation, or would they be stiff, doling out their applause only sparingly?

The horses pranced, the juggler juggled, the can-can dancer danced—act one, scene one had begun. Billy Bigelow, the barker, enticed Julie and Carrie over to the Carousel; the audience became caught up in the fast-paced action of the drama. The duet "If I Loved You" won generous applause, as did "June is Bustin' Out All Over" from the clambake scene, and Billy's magnificent "Soliloquy."

As the final curtain came down on "Carousel," and the actors took their curtain calls to a thunderous ovation, everyone knew the long hours of rehearsal had been worthwhile. The A Cappella's hard work was further rewarded: they were asked to perform at Fountain Park, Chataqua, in Remington. Again, "Carousel" was an unqualified success.

Marching Bulldogs

Pandemonium reigned supreme. The thousands in the grandstands echoed the differing sentiments of the hour. Indiana had just chosen its champion for 1965—the very best marching band in the state. There was emotion everywhere, but the supreme joy of the moment was reserved for a small residential community from the far northwest corner of Indiana. Victory was Crown Point's.

It had taken eight years of sweat and tears, but there were few regrets. The delegation of 140-strong had invaded the state capital with a moving performance formed from the score of "Victory at Sea". The occasion marked the twentieth anniversary of the Japanese surrender ending World War II. Now victory was complete.

The jubilation of the band members and their supporters at the State Fair was rivaled only by the hometown reception that awaited the returning champions. The football field was flooded with spectators wishing to see the victory performance. As newspapers spread pictures of Mr. Guth, the drum majors, and the impressive six-foot trophy across the state, few could fail to realize that Crown Point was finally Number One. This was their finest hour.

Band performances delight audiences

In the first full year with Joseph Guth directing, the Crown Point High School Band lived up to the reputation which they had earned for themselves over the years. The thrilling victory at the Indiana State Fair left the Bulldogs with an obligation to fulfill whether on the field or in concert—that of Indiana's Finest.

The marching season drew to a close with the Band providing the halftime entertainment for the football games. Before the marching uniforms went into storage, however, the Bulldogs made two special appearances—one honoring Astronaut Frank Borman, and the other serving as the guest demonstration band for the Indiana State Bandmaster's Clinic in Terre Haute.

The switch to the concert season saw an increase in the prestige of the department as well as an enlarging of its program. Five musicians were selected to participate in the All-State Band at Butler University: Pam Schweitzer, Rebecca Beasley, Sergine Oliver, John Purcell, and Randy Dunn.

Red, white shakers

With smart uniforms, bright shakers, and gleaming batons, the varsity Cadettes and twirlers give the flash and color to the Marching Bulldog Band. Besides being a part of the number one band at the Indiana State Fair, the 30 Cadettes and five twirlers marched in the Michigan City parade, the county fair, Cake Walk, and the Pop Concert. They also performed at all the home football games, Indiana State University and two basketball games.

During the week of August 8, the Cadettes accompanied the band to the band camp at Tippecanoe State Park. At this camp, the Cadettes worked in close correlation with the band to learn the state fair show for this year. Practicing approximately seven hours each day for the five days at camp, the Cadettes and twirlers finally got every step of their routine letter perfect. Mrs. Sharon Wendt teaches the Cadettes all of their routines and made this year's Cadette corps one of the finest in Indiana.

The reserve Cadettes and twirlers are an auxiliary unit for the concert band. They also perform with the reserve marching band and unite with the varsity Cadettes to do routines for special occasions. Girls in the reserve squad learn the basic fundamentals of marching and gain experience for advancement into the varsity group.

Tryouts for Cadettes are at the end of the school year. The Cadettes are selected on the basis of their ability to execute a precision routine and difficult dance steps. They are also judged on their appearance and attitude.

Inklings lays claim

On November 9, 1965, the morning mail brought exciting news for the Inklings staff: the newspaper had received on "All American" rating from the National Scholastic Press Association Critical Rating Service. This is the first time in the history of Crown Point High School that the paper has achieved such coveted honors, an accomplishment that set high standards for this year's staff. The continuation of pace-setting standards motivated the editorial board to continue award-winning journalism.

The Inklings is published weekly 32 times a year; the first issue is an authoritative guide for new students, and is distributed free. Many of the editors were trained for their jobs at the Indiana University Journalism Institute and Michigan State University under a similar program during the summer. In addition to selling to the students, the Inklings is sent to many out-of-town subscribers, and participates in a nationwide newspaper exchange program.

The new staff made numerous innovations in the style. Most noticeable of these changes are new headline and bonner styles. In addition to the news stories of the week, the Inklings provides thought-provoking editorials, several columns, and a variety of clever cartoons. The newspaper is not only a pleasure and a service to the entire school, but is a source of pride both to the staff and school.

Excalibur editors

With wrinkled brows and broken fingernails, the 1966 Excalibur staff worked feverishly to meet all of the deadlines.

Early in June most of the editorial staff traveled to different universities to special yearbook workshops. The cover was designed and work on the inside of the book got under way before school opened in September.

The beginning brought staff members together to work as a unified group in making and selling the book. The famous cartoon character, Charlie Brown, became the mascot of two sales drives as his picture was sported in every hall. Consequently, the sales slogan became, "Happiness is owning your own Excalibur."

Ideas were turned into reality when the finished yearbooks were delivered in May. All the months of work were repaid by the satisfied looks of the students as the books were handed out at the autograph dance.

This year the staff chose Wellman's in Valparaiso as the site for the Publications Banquet. The dinner ended the year with the announcement of the Excalibur staff for 1967.

The importance of athletic activity was realized long ago by the ancient Greeks. They discovered that a man was neither complete nor of maximum value to his country until he had attained a satisfactory degree of physical fitness. In today's world of automation and increasingly less manual labor, a great physical gap is appearing that must be filled by organized sports activities. Crown Point High School, recognizing this need, provides a broad based program which includes nine varsity sports. It is hoped that the spirit and dedication engendered by this competition will bolster the strength of America at its very roots—each youth of today.

of Hobart victories in season's thriller

Autumn and the start of school brought renewed activity in the camp of the Bulldog gridgers. Hoping to make amends for the previous year's finish, the Hub delegation inaugurated its practice sessions three weeks before school commenced with two daily work-outs. The turnout boasted 11 returning lettermen. Spirit was high and everyone displayed a willingness to work.

The season opened with the Football-O-Rama. Crown Point tied the Griffith Panthers 6-6 and fell to the Calumet Warriors 7-0. The first official tilt, a conference clash, pitted the Bulldogs against arch rival Merrillville, ending in a 13-13 deadlock. Bouncing back, the Hubsters downed a stubborn Lowell team 7-0, but from then on things went downhill. Three narrow losses intervened until the Highland game put Crown Point back on the winning track 13-6. Optimism was shortlived, however, as Gary Edison halted the string.

The highlight of the season was next on the schedule, as the Bulldogs turned on the state-ranked Hobart Brickies and tied 6-6. This ended the domination of Hobart, who had won every contest since 1952. The final meeting was a 24-7 loss to Lew Wallace. Halfback Bob Brock was voted Most Valuable Player and Frank Smith and Gary Paarlberg were chosen team co-captains.

Above: Although Doug Heaton looks dejected at practice, he and all other Bulldog gridgers showed immense spirit throughout the season.

Bullpup enthusiasm survives season of

With an acute shortage of personnel, the reserve and freshmen football teams could not finish with better than a poor season record. Not winning a game, the highlight of the freshmen season was a close game with Dyer, when the Bullpups scored their only two touchdowns of the year. Another interesting contest came in the form of the Munster game which ended in a 0-0 tie. Leading the freshmen through the season were Ron Hampton, Vic Harper, and Dan Paarlberg.

Coach John Shipley's reserve gridders fared little better, winning only two of a nine game schedule. The boys started the season, but on a hopeful note, tying the first game 0-0 and winning the second 27-20. From this point on, however, the trend was downward in a succession of five losses before winning their second and final game 13-6. Doing the bulk of the labor for the Bulldog reserves this season were sophomores Steve Farley, quarterback; Terry Patz, end; Dave Blimm, lineman; and Jerry Lear, fullback.

One reason for the reserves not doing too well is the fact that they spent much of their time learning the plays of the varsity teams. At least one or two nights a week were spent battling the varsity in preparation for each Friday's game.

Both coaches commented that one of the major problems of the season was not the spirit of the boys out but the lack of spirit of those that didn't come out.

Despite heavy losses through graduation, the 1965 cross country team turned in a 10-6 record in dual meets. Since only three seniors returned for the season, the slack was taken up by an outstanding crop of sophomores. Though they lacked a lead runner, the harriers displayed depth and consistency.

Before school started, the Bulldogs suffered a defeat at the hands of Hobart, followed by a loss to the state champions, Calumet, Dyer, Chesterton, Griffith, Portage, Lowell, Highland and East Gary all fell under the rising Bulldog onslaught, but Merrillville stemmed the tide by one point. Crown Point came back with decisive victories over Wirt, Gary Edison, and River Forest, but fell to both LaPorte and Michigan City in the closing dual meet of the season.

The Bulldogs proved unsuccessful in the big meets, finishing seventh in 31 competing schools at Hobart. After copping a second in the conference, the thinclads took third at Delphi. The final event of the year, the sectional, found runners falling short of regional qualification by one point.

New coaches guide young gymnasts

A young gymnastics team with only one returning letterman, junior John Repasky, found competition keen in a season climaxed by a seventh place in the state tourney. Directed by mentors Don Kyes and Russell Keller, who assumed new responsibilities in coaching, the gymnasts competed with spirited enthusiasm.

Gains for the 1966 squad were largely in the realm of experience as the season was closed with five victories, opposed to the 1965 record which posted eight wins. The gymnasts traveled to Hoagland to take their first victim. In the following meet, the Bulldogs dropped Hammond High. These two victories were followed by a stretch of very close meets which roused the hopes of the Hubsters, but it wasn't until Rich Central of Illinois visited Crown Point that the team tallied their new victory.

In the final meet of the regular season the Bulldogs posted a double victory over Hammond Clark and Highland on the home floor. Summing up the season, Coach Kyes stated, "This was a building year; however, with the bulk of the team returning in 1967 we will be looking for a better record."

The "year of the Bulldogs" reigned supreme for the cagers, as they regained the holiday tourney crown and swept sectionals for the first time in Bulldog history. Pessimism shadowed the outlook of the Crown Paint squad with only one returning letterman on the team, but a hardwood crew of juniors stepped in and helped the Bulldogs to a 16-8 record.

The first six games of the season predicted the thrills and action to follow as the Hubsters won three and lost three. Drawing the Merrillville Pirates in the first game of the holiday tourney, the Crown Painters evened the score from last year, then buried the Highlanders in the championship game, 77-44.

Prepared for sectional action, the Bulldogs blasted past Dyer in the first game, before trouncing the Red Devils in the semi-finals. Winning the sectional title, the Hubsters sunk the Pirates, 68-52. In the first game of the East Chicago regional, the Bulldogs ended their season, falling to a Hammond High quint, 67-53.

The best season record ever for the reserve cagers is now the possession of Coach Russell Marcinek and the 1965-66 squad. Seventeen victories and only three defeats marked a season total that surpassed the previous record of 14 wins and 4 dumpings. The Wirt Traapers were the first to tap the JV's in the fifth game of the season. A string of victories followed before the cagers fell to a team of Griffith Panthers midway in the year. The final defeat of the season came at the hands of the Calumet Warriors near the end of scheduled play.

Ravaging such teams as the Harace Mann Horsemen, Hobart Brickies, Noll Warriors and Valparaiso Vikings showed the power and team playing ability of this crew. Team stand-outs Cole Viers and Wayne "Dac" Hurt led the JV's through the greater part of the season. Painted out as team leader, Viers supported a field goal average of .520 and charity stripe average of .790. For a sneak preview of next year's varsity, reserves Viers, Hurt, Terry Patz, and Jeff Akers were members of the highly successful Bulldog sectional tourney squad.

Paarlberg wrestles to 3rd place in state

Positive results of a building season in 1964-65 were clearly visible as the Bulldog grapplers fought to one of the finest records ever achieved by Coach Carl Carnahan. Compiling a season 12-2 record, the wrestlers also won third place in the Calumet Conference meet and a ran very close second in the IHSAA wrestling sectional.

State third place winner, co-captain Gary Paarlberg, paced the Bulldog team with a perfect season record of 22 wins and no losses. The first four matches of the season went to the Hubsters before they dropped the fifth to a tough Gary Edison crew. The Bulldogs scored five more impressive victories before the Lowell Red Devils handed them their second and final loss.

In the sectionals, Paarlberg won his match in the 154-pound class, heavyweight George Barton topped his opponents, Mike Hickey ended victoriously and Dave Hodge swept the 180-pound weight division, placing the Bulldogs only five points behind the winning Lowell squad. Doug Heaton, co-captain, lost in the finals due to injuries. In regional competition, the Bulldogs weren't as fortunate; Paarlberg was the only member of the team surviving in competition.

Trackmen race to record setting season with seniors blazing cinders

The setting of a number of school records and the loss of key personnel at inopportune times sums up the successes and failures of the 1965 varsity track squad. The trackmen, beginning the season with a 58-42 loss to Hammond High, came back and won the Invitational Indoor Track Meet in Chicago. The cindermen continued to enjoy the feeling of victory and went on to win all dual meets.

Participation in relays was a major portion of the Hub schedule with the first one being the Hammond Noll Relays, in which no placing was awarded. For the second straight year, the Bulldogs swept to a win in the Little Five Meet. Coach Malcolm Ruby's tracksters could only tie for second in the Hammond Relays as well as second in class A of the Rensselaer Relays. The Hobart Relays netted Crown Point a third place showing in spite of injuries, while the trackmen raced to a tie for second in the Hammond Clark Relays.

The tracksters won the Calumet Conference Divisional and continued to the conference finals where they failed to defend the crown and took third. A fourth place finish in the sectional meet was overshadowed by the qualification of Jim Falkner, Bill Walls and Scott Shafer to the regionals. Shafer was the only one to proceed, and he took seventh in the state finals in the half-mile thus ending a highly successful campaign.

Batmen encounter

Entering the campaign with bright hopes for a prosperous season, the Bulldog varsity baseball team found the going rougher than anticipated. Prospects for an excellent conference finish failed to materialize with the final record in Calumet Conference play four victories and five defeats. Overall, the picture was one of a losing team as they terminated the year with an 8-9 record.

After an initial loss to Hammond Morton, the Hubsters ran up four consecutive victories and the outlook brightened considerably. The jubilations were short-lived, however, as the next four contests ended in defeat. Fortunately the tail spin ceased with a brilliant come-from-behind victory over the Warriors of Calumet and Crown Point resumed its winning ways. Three wins in the next four encounters promised future improvement, but instead the Hub delegation failed in its final three games.

The Calumet Conference effort was good enough to rate only a fourth place finish. Batting leaders were first baseman Gary Paarlberg and center-fielder Dan Petrovich. Outstanding pitchers were Gene Radio and Bud Dille. The elected co-captains were Terry Cox and Dan Petrovich, who was also honored as sole representative from Crown Point on the All-Conference team.

Stickmen compile in romping over

The 1965 Bulldog golfers turned in a successful season's record of 16-6. Miserable weather kept Coach Pete Bellessis from having serious tryouts. This hindered them and the stickmen dropped to Andreon in the first meet. The second meet saw a win chalked up against Gary Roosevelt.

The Bulldogs rolled over Dyer, Gary Edison, and East Chicago Roosevelt, but then fell to Griffith, Andreon, and Hobart. Following the loss to the Brickies, the linksmen surprised their conference foes by winning the next seven meets. In the final scheduled meet of the season, a triangular with Merrillville and Portage, the Crown Point team needed but a win over both to insure a tie for the Colimet Conference crown. The linksmen lost to Merrillville by one stroke.

The golfers again were denied victory by a stroke in the sectional. This time the state tournament fell in the balance. Dove Simstad, however, represented Crown Point in the state tournament as he shot a blazing five over par to tie for medalist honors.

Although this was the tennis team's first year of interscholastic competitive tennis, the Bulldog netmen posted an unexpected record of eight wins and three defeats. The first Crown Point tennis team started their successful year by defeating Valparaiso. The Bulldogs won the first and second singles matches, but lost the third singles match. The number one and two doubles teams won to make the score four to one, Crown Point.

The Munster netmen handed the Bulldogs their first defeat in a close match. After several hours of hard tennis, the Munster racketmen had won three of the five matches that comprise a varsity meet. Maddened by their defeat, the netmen came to life and bulldozed their way through the next six meets. The highlight of this long winning streak was the 5-0 battering of River Forest at the hands of the Bulldogs.

Gary Wirt revenged their earlier defeat by posting a victory against Crown Point. The following night the Bulldogs were trounced by a four to one defeat. The racketeers ended their season by defeating East Chicago Roosevelt.

The reserve team had three matches which they lost. However, all were against varsity teams from other schools. Mr. Keller has expressed hopes for a good season next year but will be handicapped due to the fact that the top eight players are graduating.

Noon hour intramurals channel energy into spirited, competitive recreation

The uneven parallel bar gets a work out as Kris Keck attempts to perfect her complex routine for girls' gymnastics competition and exhibition.

Intramural activities make hectic lunch hours seem shorter than they actually are. Many boys and girls prefer a fast round of table tennis or a tedious chess game to dancing in the rec room. Intramural enthusiasts include 62 percent of the student body, not to mention the faculty.

The gym is never empty during the intramural periods. Various games are scheduled for teams and individuals. Volleyball, soccer, and badminton are just a few of the sports that are offered. Basketball is probably the most popular game of all as it is the only intramural sport played after school. After the eliminations, the basketball finalists have a play-off in the evening. Emerging as champions were the "Mellow Seniors."

Many intramural sports are played in round-robin fashion. Every team is challenged by the opposing teams but the scores don't count. In this way the teams get into condition for the tournaments. To make the games more exciting, every team has its own special name. This year's teams sported such titles as "Silly Seniors," "Juniors Mints," and "Beatables II."

Competition runs high, but win or lose, everyone learns good sportsmanship and the values of team work.

Enthusiastic bystanders find intramural activity to be a break in the day's routine as Rich Brulette engages in ping pong tournament elimination.

Upper left: A forceful return by Mark Mallatt helps to score points during heated competition in volleyball contests. Above: By the fact that students often take part in more than one intramural sport, program directors claim a participation figure of over 5,000. In basketball play-offs Wally Fodemski leaps high into the air in an effort to gain possession of a loose ball. Left: David Sprague and Bill Bratten meditate during a close game of chess.

The faculty plays a vital part in creating the individual. It is the responsibility of these adults to educate students by their example of character, good citizenship, and leadership. In their teaching program, they emphasize consistently good scholarship. By continuing their own education, they can maintain fresh concepts through contact with current subject matter. They hold a common viewpoint with those they instruct. The faculty and administration discipline the mind of every individual by relating personal interests to basic principles in any subject.

Administration finds new challenges

Budgeting funds, supervising the faculty, and hiring needed personnel are accomplished by R. J. Brannock, school superintendent.

Ever-expanding enrollment and proposed reorganization concern the administration in addition of the routine process of operating a modern school system. The most important facet of this reorganization is the establishment of a ninth grade at Taft Junior High School, thus freeing the high school to concentrate on improvements for the remaining three grades. The effective development of the plan depends upon the completion of a new elementary building. Ideally, this 6-3-3 educational pattern would become effective in the fall of 1966. The search for a practicable method of school expansion sent Robert J. Brannock, superintendent of city schools, and the school board to Kansas and Colorado this fall.

The chief administrators of Crown Point High School are Ray Rogers, principal, and Roger Childress, assistant principal. Mr. Rogers attended a fine arts study program at Bennington College in Vermont during the summer. The principal enforces school policy and guides teachers and staff members as well as students. As vice principal, Mr. Childress serves on various faculty committees dealing with faculty and student activities. He also sponsors Student Council.

The Guidance Department has realized expansion with the addition of Mr. Eric Kroon, freshman counselor. Now each class has its own counselor who helps in schedule formation.

Handling the jobs of filing, recording, and typing for Mr. Brannock is the responsibility of secretaries Ruth O'Neill and Frances Pyle.

Faculty develops academic interests

HARRY ALLISON is most frequently found in the gym after school, coaching the varsity basketball team. During the regular school day he teaches business math.

RICHARD WOOD teaches woodworking to sophomores, juniors, and seniors. He sponsors the freshman class and studied this summer for his master's at Ball State.

Walking through the halls, anyone would realize the various personalities represented by a student body of nearly 1600. In studies, activities, and leisure time interests, students display their differences and similarities. Friendships are welded by common interests, but, simultaneously, every student is struggling to achieve a different goal. Each individual discovers his purpose in life. Each develops a specific method of fulfilling that purpose. Daily, students attempt to make these goals reality, and in the process gain much from sharing ideas at school and at home.

A major factor in the development of the young citizen is the community in which he lives. Here he learns the values of friendly competition, honest business practices, and solid local spirit. If the community is to meet this obligation, it must concentrate on providing a healthy atmosphere for the maturing youth. Crown Point has worked faithfully to achieve this goal as can be seen in its many civic projects. "Cool Pool Copers," the business-sponsored production to finance a municipal pool, is but one example of this extended effort to make this an ideal community.

EVERY YOUNG HOOSIER
DESERVES A FINE PORTRAIT

You'll like the way we make your student portraits and so will everyone who sees them.

Our photographers know how to combine just the right lighting and just the pose to picture your students at their natural best.

As we complete our final deadline, mapping the last few layouts and frantically searching for the proportion rule, we ask precisely what we have accomplished. In all the scrambling and calculating for just that certain pose, we have attempted to sketch the school year at a glance. Through achievement we have tried to accent individualism arising from varied masses.

Producing a yearbook from one creative thought takes cooperation and understanding that comes from an enthusiastic staff. Ours, being without previous experience, is grateful for the patience of Miss Linda Brandt, adviser, who always had a helpful suggestion for those distressed editors of 212-A. Also our appreciation goes to Mr. Bob Hastings of the American Yearbook Company, who met all our requests ranging from 3-R forms to cheese snacks. To Mr. Jack Bundy of S. K. Smith Company, we are indebted for aiding in a cover selection. Root Studio, our photographers, deserves a hearty thanks for capturing what we envisioned on film.

We sincerely hope the 1966 Excalibur conveys to you, the reader, an honest portrayal of the school life of which we are proud to be a part.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase by 1.5 billion.

As the world's population grows, the demand for food and other resources will increase. The world's population is expected to reach 9 billion by the year 2050. This means that there will be 9 billion people competing for the same resources that we have today. This is a huge challenge for the world's leaders and citizens.

One of the most important ways to address this challenge is by increasing the world's food production. This can be done by using more efficient farming techniques, such as precision agriculture, and by increasing the world's food storage capacity. This will help to ensure that there is enough food to feed the world's growing population.

Another important way to address this challenge is by reducing the world's waste. This can be done by recycling more materials, such as paper and plastic, and by reducing the amount of food that is thrown away. This will help to reduce the world's demand for resources and will help to protect the environment.

Finally, it is important to ensure that the world's resources are distributed fairly. This can be done by providing food and other resources to the world's poor and by ensuring that everyone has access to the same resources. This will help to reduce the world's inequality and will help to ensure that everyone has a chance to live a good life.

These are just a few of the ways that we can address the world's growing demand for food and other resources. It is up to us to make sure that we have enough resources to feed the world's growing population and to protect the environment for future generations.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion.

As the world's population grows, the demand for food and other resources will increase. This will put pressure on the environment and on the world's food supply.

One way to meet this demand is to increase the amount of food that is produced. This can be done by using more land for agriculture.

Another way to meet this demand is to increase the efficiency of food production. This can be done by using better farming techniques.

Both of these methods have their own problems. Increasing the amount of land used for agriculture can lead to deforestation and the loss of biodiversity.

Increasing the efficiency of food production can lead to the use of more pesticides and fertilizers, which can be harmful to the environment.

One solution is to use a combination of these methods. This would involve using better farming techniques on existing farmland and also using more land for agriculture.

Another solution is to reduce the amount of food that is wasted. This can be done by encouraging people to eat less meat and to use food more efficiently.

There are many other ways to meet the world's growing demand for food. The key is to find a way that is sustainable and that does not harm the environment.

One of the most important things we can do is to make sure that we are using our resources wisely. This means using less energy and less water, and recycling as much as possible.

By doing these things, we can help to ensure that there is enough food for everyone in the world.

There are many other things we can do to help the environment. For example, we can plant trees and protect wildlife.

By working together, we can make a difference. We can help to create a better world for ourselves and for future generations.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 1999). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 15.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 8.5 million (Office of National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of older people, and to ensure that they are able to live independently and actively in the community. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of age-friendly communities, and the establishment of age-friendly networks.

Age-friendly communities are communities that are designed to be accessible and inclusive for older people. They provide a range of services and facilities that meet the needs of older people, and they encourage older people to participate in community activities. Age-friendly networks are networks of organizations and individuals that work together to promote the well-being of older people.

There are a number of factors that contribute to the development of age-friendly communities and age-friendly networks. These factors include the availability of services and facilities, the social and cultural environment, and the participation of older people.

One of the key factors in the development of age-friendly communities and age-friendly networks is the participation of older people. Older people should be involved in the planning and development of services and facilities, and they should be encouraged to participate in community activities.

There are a number of ways in which older people can be involved in the development of age-friendly communities and age-friendly networks. These ways include participating in community activities, volunteering, and participating in decision-making processes.
